“ Carol's love of animals started when she was very young. In 1949 Mom, Carol, Charlie and I were living in a sharecroppers shack on Uncle Myron's ranch just outside Riverside, California. Dad was out to sea on the U.S.S. Boxer. Uncle Myron took in strays, both people and animals. At the time he had a couple of dogs, a cat, chickens and two Dutch draft horses who had outlived their ability to pull wagons. When we would go down to the main ranch house carol would pet the dogs, chase the cat and chickens and play in the hay barn. One day after she had exhausted the other animals she decided to visit the horses. Mom about had a heart attack when we found her. Inside the corral, under the huge roan draft horse with her arms around the front legs, peeking out between them, giggling when she saw us. I don't think she got a spanking that day, probably because Mom was just happy she did not get stepped on.
